As a follow-up to instruction, an online class guide can be made available to your class as well. This guide will contain information to help them use and reuse the skills learned during the session.

To schedule your sessions, email me at todd.shipman@auburn.edu or now is the best time to schedule a library instruction session for your graduate and undergraduate classes.

In addition to presentations on keyword searching, use of the databases, searching the catalog, or finding the full-text of an article, the library faculty also teaches students how to evaluate sources, how to distinguish scholarly, trade and popular journals, and how to search and access theses and dissertations which are available online.

Please contact me to schedule your sessions. You will receive a full lesson plan for your review and I will happy to meet with you to discuss how the session can relate to your students’ needs and their learning outcomes for your course.

A new supplement to this newsletter will be sent to you within the next few weeks. It will be an update of the new books we have received so far in 2012.

I will be generating lists of titles in Education, Counseling, Kinesiology, and Juvenile Literature that we have added so that you may be informed about our latest acquisitions.

Those who use ERIC via EBSCO have long been familiar with the feature of limiting searches to Peer-reviewed publications. Now the federal site (www.eric.ed.gov) has also added that same feature. So make sure to check out the latest version of the federal site!

Mark your calendars! Friday, September 14 is our annual Tailgate at the Libraries!!

This is a great opportunity to visit RBD Library and to have fun with the Auburn family. There will be free food and activities for the whole family. The event begins at 10 am and lasts until 1 pm. So bring the gang along and get into the Auburn spirit before our first home game.

War Eagle!!
